

On February 9, 2011 GM announced the addition of the ultimate performance ZL1 to the Camaro line for 2012 MY, with production beginning in the first quarter of 2012. Taking its name from the most elite and exclusive Camaro ever, ZL1 propels Camaro into the realm of high performance technology providing an estimated minimum 550 supercharged horsepower, Nurburgring tuned suspension with magnetic ride control, and an aggressive look including specific hood with carbon fiber insert and functional extractor. Chevrolet is very excited to unveil this next chapter in the current Camaro lifecycle.

Chevrolet is aware that SLP, a past upfitter of Chevrolet's 4th generation (1996-2002) Camaro vehicle, has been marketing its own limited edition (69) ZL1 upfit package for the 2011 Camaro model year only. Chevrolet and SLP have discussed SLP's ZL1 upfit package, an offering honoring the heritage and legacy of Chevrolet's original 1969 Camaro ZL1. Chevrolet has no objection to SLP continuing its marketing and build-out efforts to complete the run of its 2011 ZL1 upfit package.
